

I am concerned about the proposal to give low power FM stations priority over FM translator stations. My favorite station is KLOVE, 106.7 in my area, which I hear via translator. This station offers opportunities for local non-profits, like the agency I work for, to alert listeners to events and services in our community, free of charge. This provides an important public service. KLOVE also offers unique programming that I can't find on any other Greensboro station. And their music and programming is family friendly, promoting good citizenship, moral values and community service. KLOVE is a listener-supported station, and my husband and I like it so much that we support KLOVE with a monthly contribution. KLOVE is exactly the kind of station that the FCC should be encouraging to proliferate. Please don't take action that could jeopardize my KLOVE!
